As stated above, West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association staff are expected to treat customers with courtesy and respect at all times and to make every reasonable effort to address the customer's needs even when she/he is rude or difficult. It is certain however, that whatever standard of professional and positive customer service West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association achieves, there will always be a small percentage of customers whose issues cannot be dealt with to their satisfaction. This may be due to refusal by the customer to accept a West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association decision, demands placed on West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association which are not within our scope or resources to meet, or a level of rudeness or aggression shown to staff by the customer that makes it unsafe or unreasonable to proceed. Where the Chief Executive Officer is satisfied that every effort has been made by staff to address a customer's needs, he/she may make a decision that there is no reasonable prospect of reaching a position where a particular customer is satisfied with West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association's actions and service. In such a case the General Manager may decide to stop or limit responses to the customer in relation to the issue in question.

This may include:

- refusal to accept telephone calls or make appointments with the customer;
- a request that all future communication be in writing;
- provision of responses to queries, information requests only where a new issue has been presented;
- identification of a single staff member as contact person through whom all communication must occur.

Where the CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER has made such a decision, she/he will ensure that this is communicated in writing to the customer and that the customer is given the opportunity to make representations to West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association about the proposed course of action. In addition, the CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER will advise West Sydney Wolves Basketball Executive Committee members of any correspondence issued in relation to such a decision.

The CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER will continue to monitor any further contact with the customer over the issue. Rude, abusive or aggressive behavior may include rude or otherwise vulgar noises, expressions or gestures, verbal abuse of either a personal or general nature, intimidating, threatening or offensive behavior, physical violence against property or physical violence against a person. If, in the opinion of any staff member, rude, abusive or aggressive comments or statements are made in telephone conversations or interviews, the staff member may:

- warns the caller that if the behavior continues, the conversation or interview will be terminated
- terminates the conversation or interview if the rude, abusive or aggressive behavior continues after a warning has been given.

Where a conversation or interview is terminated, the staff member must then inform his/her Supervisor of the incident and make a diary note of the event. Where appropriate, the Manager will then discuss the matter with the CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER to determine what action should be taken with respect to the customer's behavior. If, in the opinion of the CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER, any correspondence to West Sydney Wolves Basketball Association contains personal abuse, inflammatory statements or material clearly intended to intimidate, it will be placed on the relevant file and not otherwise acted upon.
